

Educational Interpreting and Ethics

January 29 – March 3, 2024

Educational Interpreting and Ethics is a 5-week, self-paced, online course intended to stimulate discussion of current trends and ethical issues in educational interpreting. The five units will include information presented in video or written format covering topics including language models, 'motherese,' prosody, interpreters as related service providers, IEP development, Code of Professional Conduct, social development and language deprivation. We will discuss significant developmental milestones in different age groups and how that affects interpreting. There will be an ethical issue presented and discussed each week through an online discussion board.
